ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 11, 17--

You will rejoice to hear that no disaster has accompanied the commencement of an enterprise which you have regarded with such evil forebodings.

-Captain Robert Walton, in Mary Shelley, Frankenstein, 1888.

In the early twentieth century the City of Toronto extended Dundas Street eastward from today's Ossington Avenue to Kingston Road.

City planners stitched together over thirteen streets using minor roadworks, and a single name to build what is now Toronto's longest East-West thoroughfare.

Physical and sensory traces of this process remain today.

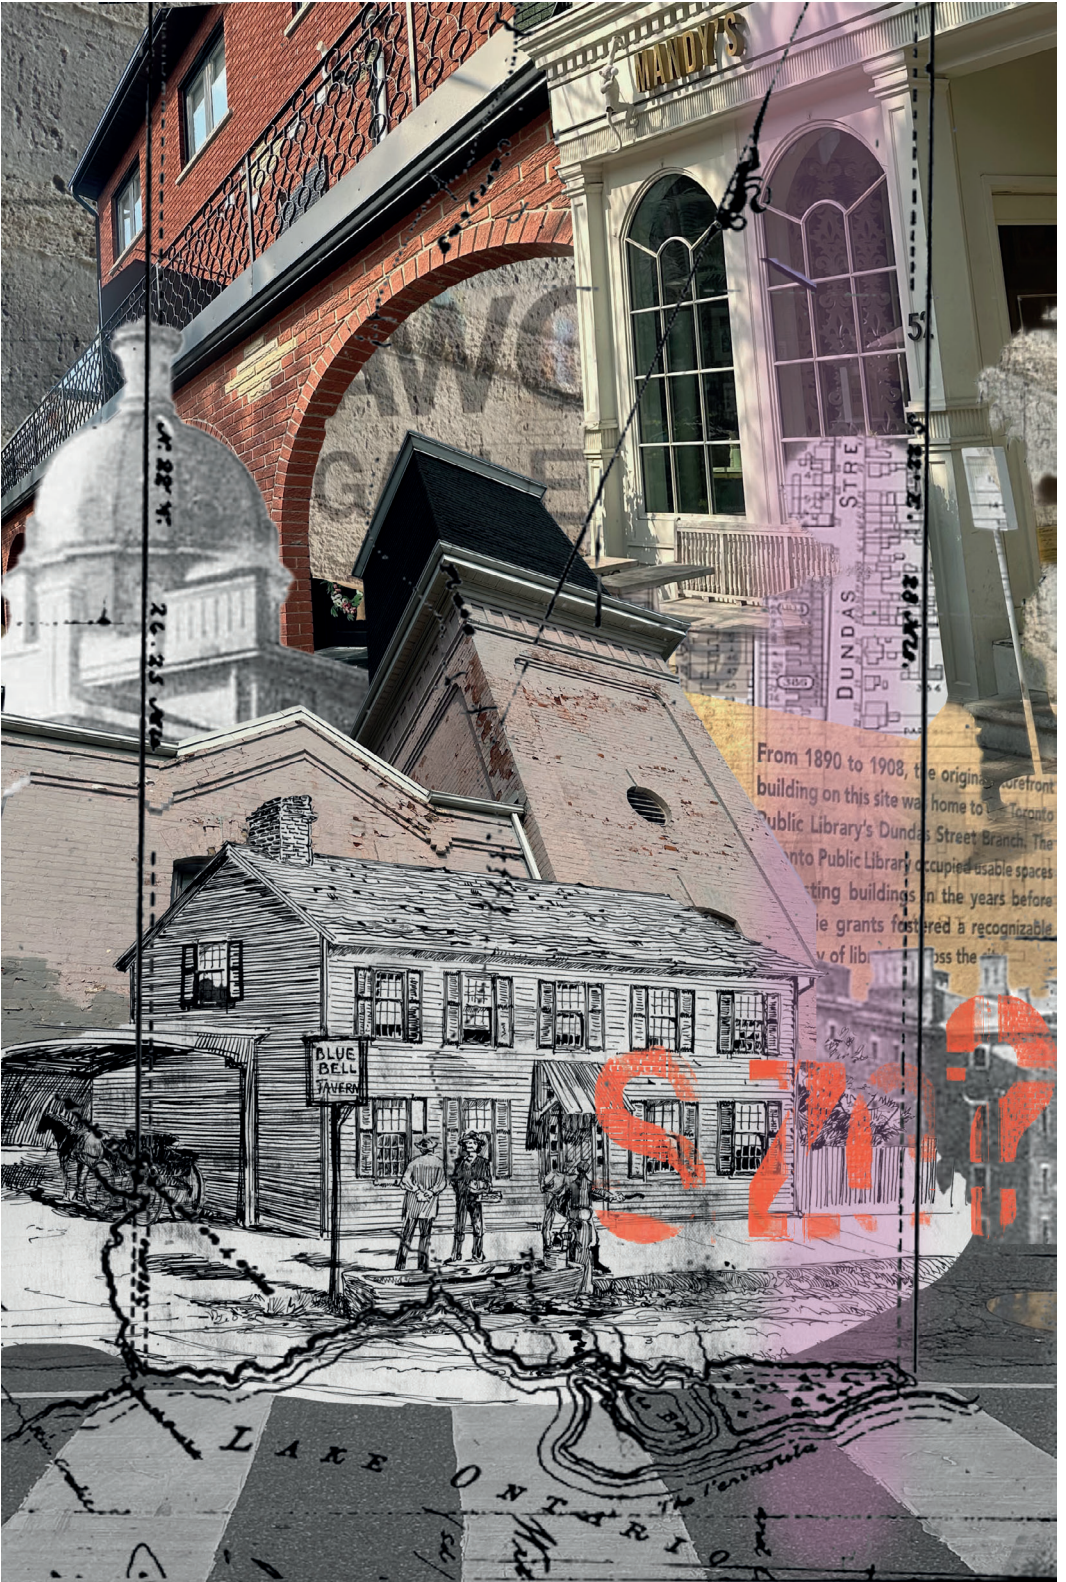

This book is an invitation toward,
and a document of, the experience of these traces, the stories and relationships they reveal, obscure, and the multiple, potential futures they propose.

Use accordingly, carefully, and in the company of others.

"He's hard to read. He mumbles.
He's kind of hard to understand.
He averts his gaze, but he looks fairly innocuous.
He dresses well and he is usually wearing a suit.
I think he was wearing a suit that day.

Kind of average height, average weight,
very difficult face to remember.
He didn't look like an assassin."

A communication was received from the Secretary of St. Patrick's School Old Boy's Association protesting against the changing of the name of St. Patrick Street to Dundas Street and suggesting that if this name is to take effect, that the names of McEwen and Duncan should be changed to St. Patrick Street. When the question of changing the name of St. Patrick to Dundas Street was under consideration, representatives from St. Patrick's Church were present and whilst not opposing the change, suggested that the name be perpetuated and given to another street. No promise was given at the time, but it was intimated.

BRITISH METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Former Black slaves who had escaped the United States founded the British Methodist Episcopal (BME) Church on Chestnut Street in 1845. Located in St. John's Ward, the BME Church provided a place of worship and community and many Black Torontonians came together here to discuss and organize political movements for abolition and equality. The Church moved to a new location in 1952 and, in 2016, the cornerstone of the Church was unearthed in an excavation of the site.

KEW DOCK YIP AND THE CHINESE EXCLUSION ACT

Chinese immigrants in the 19th century faced discrimination and exclusion. The Chinese Exclusion Act of 1882 was the first federal law to restrict immigration based on ethnicity. Kew Dock Yip, a Chinese immigrant, was one of the many who faced these challenges. The act was a significant milestone in the history of Chinese immigration to Canada.

Moses and Phoebe, Kitty, Henry, Sussex Name Unknown

THE WRITER
Susanna Moodie

(1803-1885), CHRONICLER OF LIFE IN UPPER CANADA,
AND AUTHOR OF ROUGHING IT IN THE BUSH, LIVED AT 233 DUNDAS STREET EAST FROM 1861 TO 1884.

Jarvis Street and Jarvis Collegiate Institute

William Jarvis enslaved six people in York around the turn of the 18th century: Moses, Phoebe, Kitty, Prince and another woman (name unknown). When John Graves Simcoe sought to make slavery illegal in Upper Canada in 1793, Jarvis vehemently opposed him, which meant that enslavement was gradually phased out instead of being abolished. Even after the anti-slavery legislation was passed, Jarvis petitioned the court to punish two enslaved people who escaped his mansion to try to get married.

After William Jarvis died, his son Samuel Jarvis inherited a lot surrounding modern Jarvis Street and built a house on it. While he was chief superintendent of Indian Affairs he rushed through a sale of Six Nations land to the Crown without full consent. He then stole money from the Six Nations Trust Fund and invested it in a losing venture. He was never prosecuted for this theft and no compensation has ever been paid to the Six Nations. An 1844 Royal Commission found that at least 4000€ went missing under Jarvis. He retired in disgrace and due to ongoing debts subdivided a portion of his family's lot to create a series of new streets, including Jarvis Street.

"What we accept, what we honour, who we choose to honour says a lot about what we value as a society."

To Change Names Of Four Streets

Without moving, residents of four streets in Toronto's east end will undergo a change of address when the Dundas St. E. extension is completed.

City council last night endorsed a recommendation by Planning Commissioner LeMay that Dagmar, Dock, Applegrove and Ashbridge Aves., which will be part of the extension, be changed to Dundas St. when the work is completed. LeMay suggested the renaming be deferred so that the householders affected would have an opportunity to make the necessary changes in their personal stationery, among other things.

THE ASHBRIDGE ESTATE

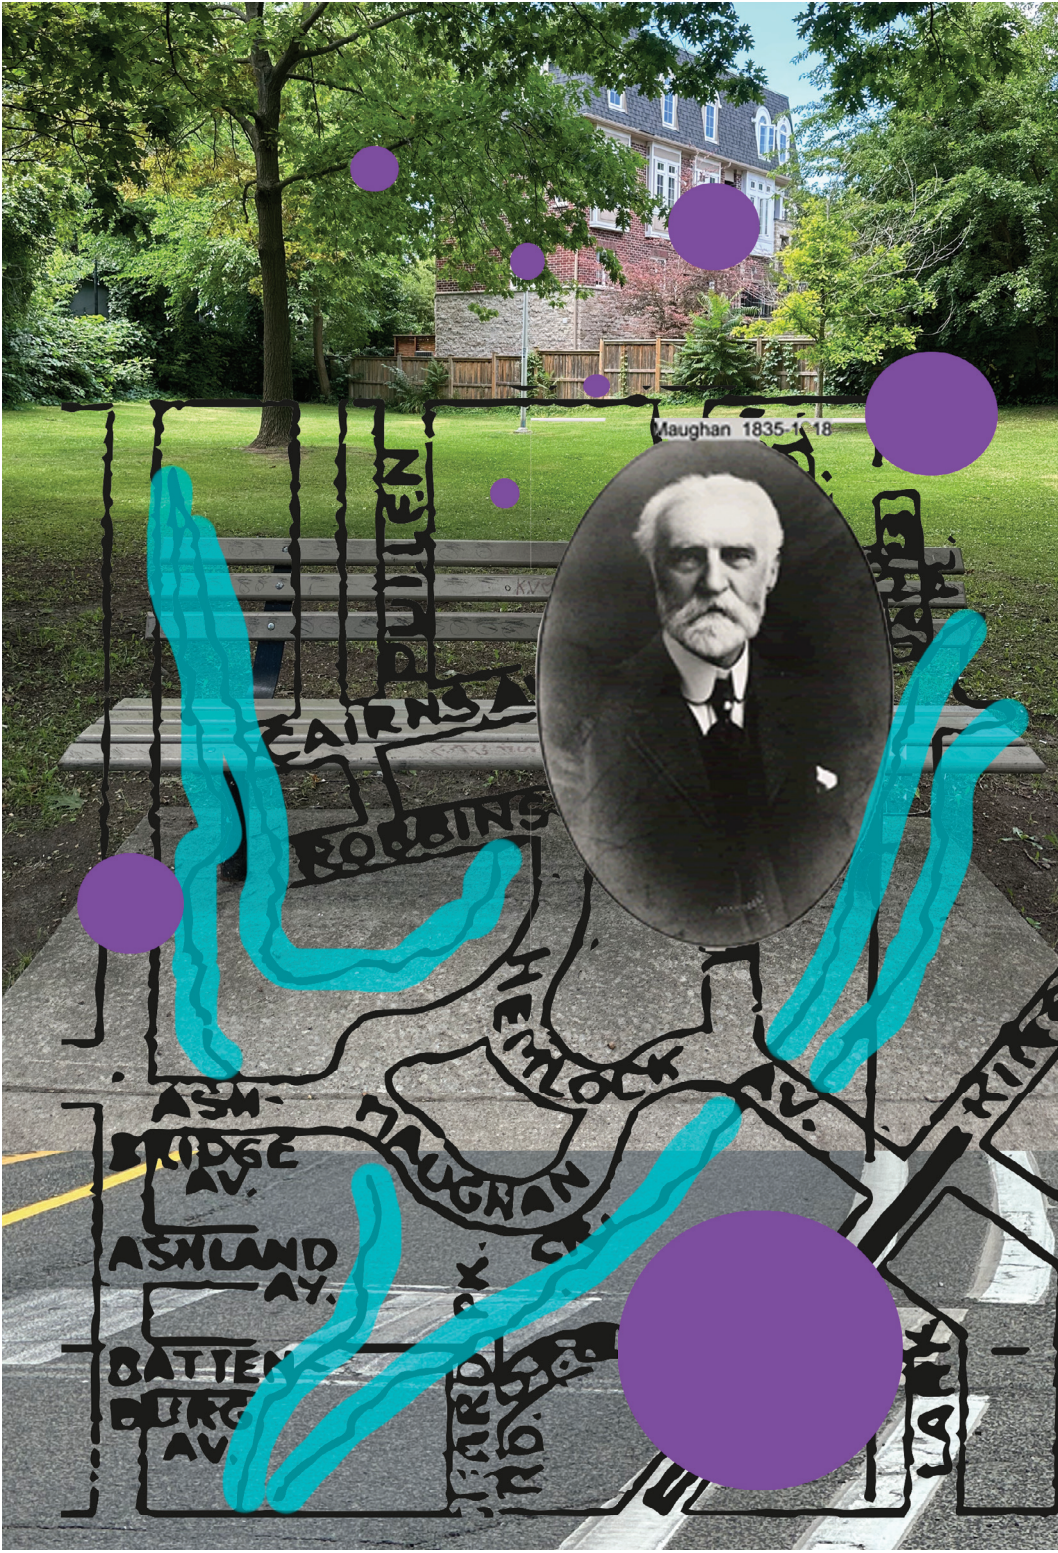

This property was home to one family for two centuries. Sarah Ashbridge and her family moved here from Pennsylvania and began clearing land in 1794. Two years later they were granted 600 acres (243 hectares) between Ashbridge's Bay and present-day Danforth Avenue. The Ashbridges prospered as farmers until Toronto suburbs began surrounding their land in the 1890s. They sold all but this part of their original farm by the 1920s. Donated to the Ontario Heritage Foundation in 1972, it was the family estate until 1997. As they changed from pioneers to farmers to professionals over 200 years on this property, the Ashbridges personified Ontario's development from agricultural frontier to urban industrial society.

Six Street Names To Disappear, All Become Dundas

Names of six city streets will disappear when they are re-named Dundas St. E. as part of the extension which is now under way.

Works committed yesterday approved of the change. The names which are to be dropped are Whitby, Dagmar, Doon, Applegrove, Ashbridge, and Maughan Cres. They are all part of the plan to carry Dundas St. through to Kingston Rd. Part of Edgewood Ave. will be incorporated in Dundas St. Eave, will
